'The community shouldn't feel safe'

To catch a killer. The Muller family begs others to help them find a killer, and bring closure.

Tips

The city is offering a $40,000 reward — $20,000 per victim — for information that leads to an arrest and conviction.

- Anyone with information is asked to call the Police Tip Line at 215-686-8477, or text a tip to PPDTIP (773847). The homicide unit can also be contacted directly at 215-686-3335.

Quoted

"Our family has deep roots in this community. We do not know why someone chose to murder them. What is certain is that Richard and Donna Muller should not be dead."

Catherine Rohland,
sister and aunt of the deceased

The relatives of Donna and Richard Muller appealed to the neighborhood of Lawncrest, the parish of St. William's and the city of Philadelphia.

They're looking for an executioner.

"I am begging this community that has experienced so many acts of tragedy and violence in recent months to come together and push back against this violence," said Heather Muller Kunf, Donna's daughter and Richard's sister.

On Wednesday, inside the Church of St. William on the 6000 block of Rising Sun Avenue, the Muller family spoke publicly for the first time regarding the "execution-style" murder of the mother and her son on Jan. 19. Donna, 49, and her 22-year-old son, Richard, who were found dead on the second floor of their Northeast Philadelphia row home on the 300 block of Stevens Street with gunshot wounds to the back of the head.

Despite various leads and tips, police are no closer to finding the murderer.

"[There are] no good leads right now," said Capt. James Clark. "We've gotten several tips, but I'm letting the public know we need more because a lot of them have fizzled out."

There was no sign of forced entry. Nothing was stolen and the house wasn't ransacked. The dog didn't bark.

"We don't have motive," Clark said.

Clark said police still aren't sure whether this incident was related to the triple homicide in Lawncrest in February, in which three people were also killed in the same execution style.

Kunf added: "I can't sleep at night knowing that whoever did this is still out there, and I don't feel safe. The community shouldn't feel safe."

Weather. Warm temps return; so does rain

The rainy weather will continue this morning and afternoon, but the temperatures will increase significantly as a warm front is coming through the Philadelphia region.

Temperatures will reach the mid-70s today, said Jim Bunker, observing program leader for the National Weather Service in Mount Holly, New Jersey.

A flood watch is in effect until noon today. New rainfall amounts could be up to a half-inch.

Temperatures will fall again tonight to a low around 51 with partly cloudy skies. But on Friday, sunny skies are slated to return to the region and the high temperature will be around 70.

Voting has closed, and NASA announced the winning selection for its next-generation space suit, which was designed by Philadelphia University students, and voted on by the American people.

NASA narrowed their visions for NASA's Z-2 space suit down to three concepts: biomimicry, technology and trends in society.

Technology, which from the beginning had a high approval rating, won in a landslide. NASA expects a prototype will be available by the fall.

Four defendants face trial for murder charges

Next step. Four men were held for a March Logan slaying, while another is now only charged with conspiracy.

Jerry Savath / PPD

The five men arrested for a Logan murder that ended in a dramatic SWAT raid in March were in court for a preliminary hearing Wednesday.

Tommy Savath, 21, Jerry Savath, 22, Davey Yath, 19, Rattanak Sarik, 28, and Sambatt Choub, 18, were arrested after 24-year-old Khoeum Roeun was shot to death while in a car outside the Savaths' home around 6 p.m. March 11. Roeun's 23-year-old brother was also shot in the foot.

All five barricaded themselves inside the Savaths' home on the 1300 block of Ruscomb Street. After several hours, SWAT officers entered the home and arrested the men, seizing five semi-automatic rifles.

Choub now only faces conspiracy charges.

The Savath brothers are also charged with the August 2012 shooting death of Nachgaie Newman, 24.

A defendant's brother who asked to not be named said the victim was a long-time rival who provoked the incident by coming to the defendants' home that night.

School newspaper can't ban 'Redskins'

The school board of Neshaminy High School approved a policy that forbids the school's newspaper staff from banning the word "Redskins" when it refers to a sports team or mascot.

The paper's staff last October voted to ban the word, calling it a "racial slur." The school principal in December said they were not allowed to do that.

Reports say board members said the banning violated the free-speech rights of students who wanted to write about the sports teams. METRO

Woman with more than 200 cats hit with charges

Jacobson's cats are treated by the PSPCA forensic team.

PSPCA

Lanie Jacobson, 64, of the 1600 block of Fillmore Street, was officially charged this week with animal cruelty, 241 counts for unsanitary conditions and 44 counts for failure to provide veterinary care.

Jacobson could face up to 90 days imprisonment and 90 days prohibition of animal ownership per charge.

Police also served an arrest warrant on Jacobson Tuesday and charged her with two misdemeanors for conspiracy and possession of a controlled substance.

PSPCA first executed a search warrant on Jacobson's home on March 26 and due to unsanitary conditions, including high levels of ammonia, removed all the cats from the home.

The cats were transferred to the PSPCA's Erie Avenue shelter, examined by veterinarians and given necessary care, the PSPCA said.

Almost 100 cats have been adopted or transferred to other rescue organizations.

More than 50 cats are available for adoption still. Jacobson has reportedly refused to surrender 73 remaining cats, which will remain in PSPCA care until the legal matters are completed.

NBA owners likely to force Sterling to sell

Removing Sterling. The board's advisory finance committee will hold a meeting today to go over the next steps.

The National Basketball Association's 29 team owners will likely vote to force Donald Sterling to sell the Los Angeles Clippers after he was banned for life for racist comments, some of the owners said on Wednesday.

As it appeared more likely the team would be put up for sale, talk show host turned media businesswoman Oprah Winfrey emerged among potential buyers who have expressed interest. She said she was in discussions with producer and film studio executive David Geffen and Oracle Corp. computer technology Chief Executive Officer Larry Ellison to bid for the team if it becomes available.

NBA Commissioner Adam Silver, who also announced a $2.5 million fine on Sterling on Tuesday, asked the league's governing board of fellow owners to act immediately to force Sterling to sell the club he bought 33 years ago.

Although no firm date for the vote was given by the NBA, early indications were that owners would overwhelmingly support the unprecedented move. REUTERS

Opposition. Senate Republicans block bid to hike minimum wage

Democrats argue that an increase in minimum wage would boost the economy overall and plan to use the issue to rally their liberal base ahead of the November congressional elections. / GETTY IMAGES

U.S. Senate Republicans on Wednesday blocked one of President Barack Obama's top legislative priorities, a bill to raise the federal minimum wage for the first time in five years.

On a nearly party-line vote of 54-42, supporters fell short of the 60 votes that would have been needed to end a procedural roadblock against the legislation in the Democratic-led Senate.

Just one Republican, Sen. Bob Corker of Tennessee, joined Democrats in voting to advance the bill.

Senate Democratic Leader Harry Reid switched his vote from yes to no to reserve his right to bring up the bill again.

President Barack Obama attacked Republicans over their opposition at an event at the White House later in the day where he again argued that 16 million minimum-wage workers deserve a raise.

The non-partisan Congressional Budget Office estimated that the bill would raise the wages of about 16.5 million Americans and lift 900,000 out of poverty.

But it also estimated the bill could cost up to 1 million Americans their jobs because businesses may simply be unable to afford to pay them.

Polls show that most Americans, upward of 60 percent, say they would support a minimum-wage increase.

But Republicans on Monday cited a Bloomberg Poll in which 57 percent of respondents said it was an "unacceptable" trade-off if the bill raised the incomes of 16.5 million Americans while eliminating 500,000 jobs. REUTERS

The bill would increase the minimum wage to $10.10 per hour during the next three years and then adjust it for inflation in the future. The federal minimum wage is now $7.25 an hour.

Senators ready to try again on US cybersecurity legislation

U.S. administration officials, private sector executives and privacy advocates are reviewing a draft of a bill that would encourage sharing of cybersecurity data between the government and companies, two key Senators said on Wednesday.

Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman Dianne Feinstein, a California Democrat, and Vice Chairman Saxby Chambliss, a Georgia Republican, said they have circulated the draft to key stakeholders in its early stages to avoid the disagreements that have thwarted passage in the past.

"We have worked together for months to draft a bill that allows companies to monitor their computer networks for cyber attacks, promotes sharing of cyber threat information and provides liability protection for companies who share that information," Feinstein and Chambliss said in a statement.

U.S. lawmakers have been considering legislation to provide clarity about how private companies should be required to disclose security breaches and cyber threats, but spats over liability and privacy protections have thwarted passage of comprehensive cyber security bills thus far. REUTERS

V. Stiviano is v. saddened by Sterling's ouster

According to her lawyer, Stiviano "never wanted to harm Donald." / GETTY IMAGES

V. Stiviano might be many things (namely, an artist, lover, writer, chef, poet, stylist and philanthropist, according to her Instagram), but she is not heartless.

Stiviano, who recently gained notoriety as Donald Sterling's alleged ex-lover, is "very saddened" by the NBA's decision to place a lifetime ban on Sterling, reports the Los Angeles Times. Her lawyer Mac Nehoray told the Times that Stiviano "never wanted to harm Donald."

He also claimed that Stiviano did not release the recordings and is mortified about the incident. Nehoray said "someone released it for money" — but someone who was not Stiviano. "My client is devastated that this got out," he told the Times.

Nehoray stated that Stiviano, 31, was never in a relationship with Sterling, 80. "It's nothing like it's been portrayed," Nehoray said. "She's not the type of person everyone says." He said Sterling's estranged wife Rochelle was friends with Stiviano and knew that Sterling had purchased an apartment for her.

He also described Stiviano as an upstanding citizen who volunteered to help crime victims before starting her job as an archivist for Sterling.

Though comedian Eddie Izzard has been appearing in more dramatic acting roles lately, such as in his appearance on NBC's "Hannibal," the comedian promises he never really left stand-up behind. He's on a massive 28 country tour right now, where he'll take audiences on a journey through history — with a healthy degree of freshness — each night. "I improvise as much as I can in every single show," he tells us.

EDDIE IZZARD

The comedian tells us about his new act and which countries can hear him in their native languages.

MULTILINGUAL COMEDY

Eddie Izzard performs May 3 through May 5 at the Forrest Theatre (1114 Walnut St.). For more info call 800-447-7400. / ANDY HOLLINGWORTH

Let's start with the basics: What can we expect from your tour?
It's a tour through my brain again, but hopefully with some intelligent points — like why the hell did we do human sacrifice? There is no logical reason why a god that created people would actually like people cut up into little bits.

Do the gods sort of want a refund on specific people?
I don't believe in a god. But I can understand why people would, especially in the old days when we were just farmers and when the weather was bad, you could see why they would say, "the gods hate us," so we must make them happy, so you do a rain dance, you do a sun dance, you make an offering, you do harvest festivals. ... But I cannot see any logic when you say, "What the gods really want is that one of the guys they sent down and put on the Earth, they would like killed and sent back up."

Do you find yourself looking for material in a global way, or do you like to focus on the U.K.?
No, because this is [my] most expansive comedy tour, and maybe most expansive tour ever. I may as well claim it. There's actually about 28 countries right now, and I'm touring in Spanish and French and German now, so I need stuff that is going to work around the world.

LISA WEIDENFELD
@LisaWeidenfeld
lisa.weidenfeld@metro.us

Q&A

Habla espanol?

Wait, you said you're "touring in Spanish"?
I'm about 40 percent fluent in German now. I started learning Spanish two weeks ago, went to Madrid and did seven lessons in seven days, three hours a day. And then I was putting in standup each night, so I was increasing it. Tonight in Los Angeles I will do 60 minutes in English and 15 minutes in Spanish as an encore. So I invited people to come that are bilingual. It will be fascinating to see that. Once I can get the Spanish to about an hour, hour and 15 minutes, I can tour down in all of South America. That will be fantastic.

ENTER BY 5/4!

2 'Fading Gigolo'
The latest film directed by and starring John Turturro casts the onetime Barton Fink as a middle-aged florist who tries to make some bucks as a male prostitute. Woody Allen plays his pimp. Seriously, that's the plot.

3 'Blue Ruin'
The latest breathlessly hyped indie thriller is a revenge saga about a man whose mission to enact vengeance doesn't go as well as it once did for Charles Bronson in "Death Wish."

4 'Dancing in Jaffa'
Portraying an attempt to ease tensions between Israelis and Palestinians, this documentary looks at a ballroom-dancing titan who returns home hoping that hoofing will bring people together.

5 'The Other Woman'
Nick Cassavetes does another film that his father, director John Cassavetes, likely never would've touched: a comedy in which three women (Cameron Diaz, Leslie Mann and Kate Upton) gang up on the man they're all unwittingly sleeping with.

6 'Brick Mansions'
Ten years ago the French film "District B13" introduced parkour to action films. Now it's been remade with the late Paul Walker as the cop in an "Escape from New York"-style criminal compound.

ADMIT ONE

Metro rounds up what's in cinemas this week.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

7 'The Quiet Ones'

See more at www.metro.us

You're not a filmmaker until you've done an offbeat vampire movie. Here's Jim Jarmusch's attempt. Tilda Swinton and Tom Hiddleston play centuries-old lovers hanging in Detroit, listening to records and ignoring the genre's cliches.

9 'Under the Skin'
Scarlett Johansson is getting raves for this peerlessly disquieting mood piece from director Jonathan Glazer ("Sexy Beast," "Birth"), in which she plays a sexy alien seductress who picks up horny dudes in Glasgow.

10 'Heaven Is for Real'
In the hit book by the same name, a cash-strapped preacher exploits his son's near-death experience to make some big bucks. Now it's a big movie with Greg Kinnear.

Stretching 'The Truth'

Pipes. R&B singer Ledisi — a favorite of the Obamas — is aiming for a broader audience.

Ledisi says she's embracing who she has become on "The Truth." / UNIVERSAL MUSIC GROUP

What do Beyonce, John Legend and Ledisi have in common?

They all performed at Michelle Obama's birthday party in January. For Ledisi, who has just released a new album, "The Truth," it was just another day at the White House.

The R&B singer has performed there multiple times.

"It's always the same feeling where I have an 'A ha!' moment — whoa, I can't believe I'm here," Ledisi says. "[The Obamas] make you feel so comfortable, it's like talking to friends or family members, and they love music and people. They look you in the eye when they're speaking to you, and you might be calm on the outside but inside, you're freaking out. They really appreciate my gift!"

The Obama-Ledisi connection became public in 2010 when Michelle Obama told People magazine, "She's got that really pretty voice." That voice, which has racked up eight Grammy nominations so far, should get broader appeal now, thanks to "The Truth." The tracks have a bit more of a contemporary, poppier feel than the sultry ballads and jazzy cuts on her previous albums. The lead single, "I Blame You," is an appealing mid-tempo R&B jam that showcases the soaring power of Ledisi's pipes.

"It's about wanting to open up to different audiences that I've been closed to," Ledisi says. "I wanted to open it up to younger audiences."

Ledisi, full name Ledisi Anibade Young, is a New Orleans native who moved to Oakland, California, in her teens. She started out on the indie route with 2000's "Soulsinger: The Revival," and her major label debut was 2007's "Lost & Found" on Verve. Now, it's time for "The Truth."

"There are songs that will make you feel upbeat and songs about relationships that didn't work," she says. "I'm embracing who I am and who I've become."

Supermodel Heidi Klum spills her style secrets

See more at www.metro.us

Model behavior. Steal Heidi Klum's tips for looking good, even when you're pressed for time.

Heidi Klum is a top model, businesswoman, TV host and mom. But she still made time to tell us her beauty secrets and tips for looking good, even when you're crazy busy.

What beauty products do you rely on to look glamorous even when you're frazzled?
I wear a lot of mascara and a beautiful lipstick. I like to talk with my eyes, so I need a lot of mascara.

What's your beauty routine on your days off?
On my days off, I don't do too much. I might put on a BB cream to hide imperfections, but I don't put a lot of makeup on. It's good to give your skin a break and go natural every once in a while.

Do you only wear high heels to work, or do you wear them every day?
I wear them as much as possible because when I don't wear them and I walk into a room, people go, "You are so much shorter than I thought!" So when I have to meet new people I'm always in heels.

Do you have any tips for buying shoes?
When you go into a shoe store and try shoes on, you really have to walk around and see if you can actually walk. So many times in the shoe store, you put the shoes on, and you're like, "Yeah, they fit." And you bring them home and realize that you can't walk in them. There's nothing more unattractive than when a woman can't walk in heels. You should really know how to walk in them before you buy them. Otherwise it's better to go a little shorter in a heel.

Are there any hot trends this season that are catching your eye?
I like to buy classic things that I can wear for many, many years.

Hot mama

What is your best tip to getting dressed when you're a busy mom with a job?
My best tip is to get rid of all the things that don't look good, so you don't have the temptation to wear those things again. Maybe just try things on in front of an honest friend that will tell you if it doesn't look good on you. Sometimes jeans are just too tight, even though you feel like they fit. It's good to get rid of things, like the baggy sweatpants you should not be wearing anymore. I like to slouch around too, but I don't let myself go too slouchy. So the super-slouchy things — goodbye!

DON'T LET THE HEADLINES RUIN YOUR ROMANCE

Dating and hooking up can be exciting processes of discovery shared between two or more people who love each others' genitals. Sometimes your fact-finding activities lead to less-than-desirable revelations. One minute you're laughing and the next, a hot-button news item pops up and triggers a fiery debate. If this sounds like something that would get you pissed off, hot and a little bit turned on, don't necessarily let headlines rip your potential relationships apart. Here are a few tips to keep the passion burning without igniting any damaging explosions:

"Wow, that was some good bedroom-warming, but I really wish this person felt differently about global warming." / IMAGE SOURCE

Have adult conversations

Do not distract, evade, deflect or otherwise attempt to manipulate your partner into believing you are someone or something that you are not.

Think outside of the box

From new fetishes to favorite restaurants, exploring unknown territories can be fun. When it comes to your lover's new-to-you politics, if you spend time listening to what sounds like flaws in rational thinking on their part, will you eventually despise your love interest? If yes, move on.

Funky Brown Chick

AWARD-WINNING EDUCATOR AND SEX COLUMNIST. FOLLOW HER ON TWITTER @ FUNKYBROWNCHICK

Most importantly

Don't expect your partner to change

Seriously, give up. You won't convince them that their long-standing beliefs are wrong. I don't care how good you are in bed!

Know your deal-breakers

Don't screw anyone who says disrespectful comments about you and stay away from people who do not support your basic view of humanity. Racist, homophobic or anti-Semitic remarks are reasonable boundaries!

‘Everything is evolving’

Hot chef. Bridget Foy likes the direction South Street is headed in.

While she’s not a chef per se, Bridget Foy has enough restaurant experience to hold her own in any kitchen. It’s her name, after all, on the sign at Second and South streets. As operations manager for Bridget Foy’s, Foy has her hands full with menu planning, as well as prepping for events like this Saturday’s South Street Headhouse Spring Festival.

What are you guys making for the festival?
We’ll have a booth set up outside the restaurant where we’ll be grilling sliders. And we’re going to have a barbecue short rib taco and churros with salted caramel.

How do you decide on your menu for events like this?
We wanted to highlight some signature items, but we also wanted things that will work well in a festival environment — things that people can eat standing up or on the run.

You have a long-standing connection with South Street and Queen Village. How have you seen the area evolve as a food destination?
It seems that right now a lot of great things are popping up, like [bar/restaurant] Society Hill Society, which just opened. And we have some really good spots at Headhouse, like Twisted Tail. I think it’s a great time for all of us now. There is new construction and condos coming in and it seems like everything is evolving in a good direction.

Downtime

How about when you’re not working – which is rare. Where can we find you?
Going out to eat with two kids can be interesting. We like to go to ethnic places in our neighborhood. Anything that has a quick serve and is tasty.

Brunch

Keeping it fresh

Bridget Foy’s is well known for the brunch menu. How do you keep it fresh?

We always have the staples that people look for in breakfast food, like eggs Benedict and omelets. But we’re always looking for new inspiration. Like right now we’re making blueberry ricotta pancakes and a short rib hash.

Follow the money, all right

Re: 'Climate cha-ching' (Metro, April 30) While I agree that Mother Nature is an unpredictable force, I find it astonishing that far too many low-information citizens see the green movement as a money grab, when we're practically paying the equivalent of a gallon of milk for a gallon of gas. The fossil-fuel industry and speculative trading is fleecing the average consumer. Although we cannot "control" nature, why is being better stewards of the planet by lowering our carbon footprints — as well the introduction of renewables, which will allow greater access and lower costs to consumers — perceived as part of a nefarious liberal agenda? The outrage is due to ignorance of scientific facts.

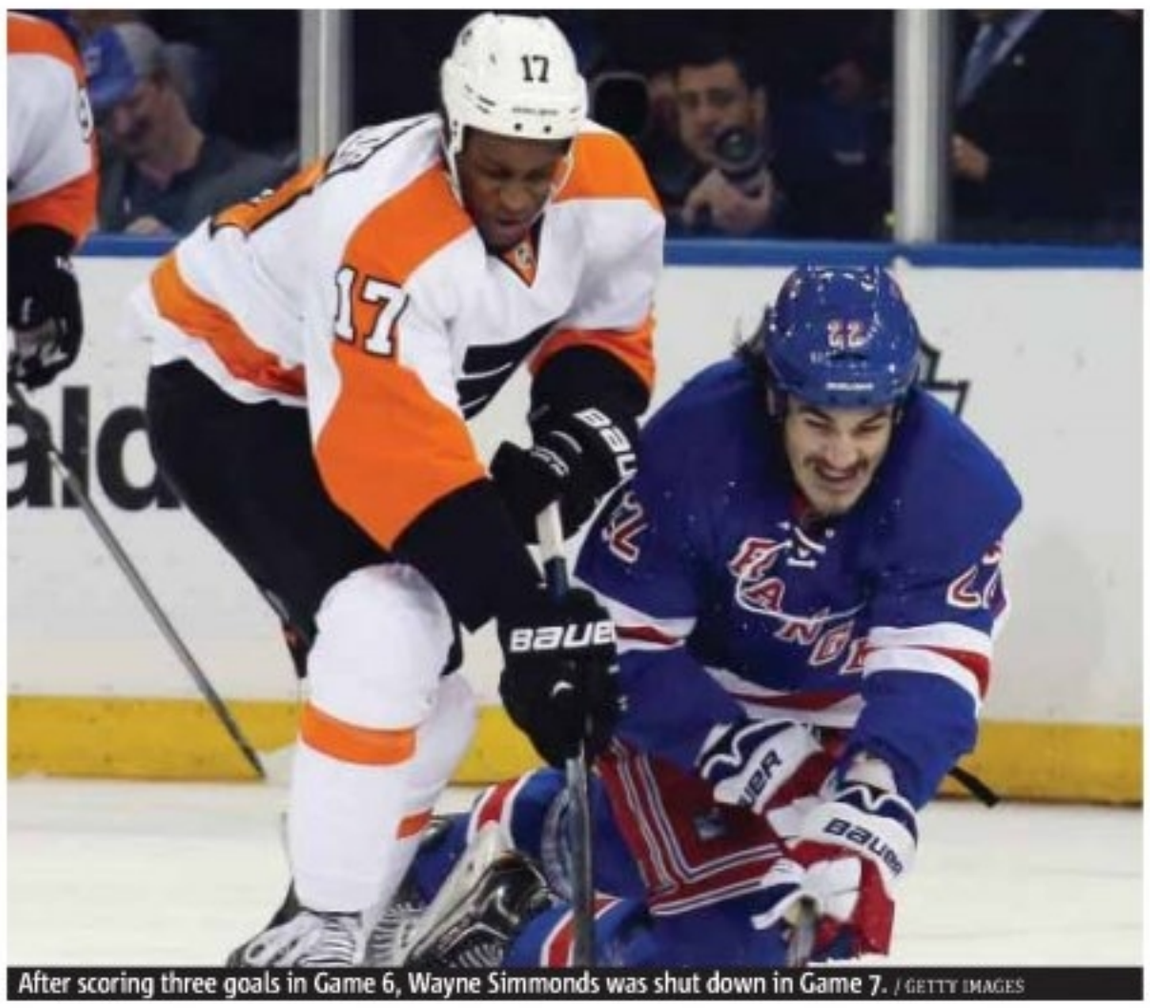
Season, memorable series end for Flyers

NHL. The Flyers dug a hole in the second period and couldn't pull out of it against the Rangers.



After scoring three goals in Game 6, Wayne Simmonds was shut down in Game 7. / GETTY IMAGES

After forcing a Game 7 in New York, the Flyers played a lousy second period and couldn't come back from a two-goal deficit. They were ousted from the playoffs Wednesday in a 2-1 loss.

In every game this series, except for Tuesday's blowout 5-2 victory, the Flyers fell behind and had to play from a hole right from the start.

This was no different.

It was fitting that Daniel Carcillo had a hand in ending the Flyers' season. The former Philly enforcer netted a goal at the start of the second period to get the Rangers ahead 1-0 after they killed a penalty. Mats Zuccarello set up Carcillo on a perfect pass and goalie Steve Mason didn't have much of a chance.

Benoit Pouliot added to the Flyers misery, beating the Flyers netminder with a slapshot at the 8:14 mark in the second, giving the Rangers a comfortable 2-0 lead and what would wind up as the game-winning goal.

In the third period, the Flyers fought back, with a Jason Akeson struck for a goal himself less than four minutes into the final stanza to cut the New York advantage to 2-1.

It was downright remarkable that the Rangers, less than 24 hours removed from their biggest drubbing of the playoffs, were able to skate with such speed and confidence and down the Flyers in such convincing fashion.

The Flyers did generate some potent scoring tries, but Henrik Lundqvist was back to his old self, turning away 26 Flyers' shots.

Philadelphia made a desperate effort with an extra attacker in the final minute, but couldn't generate a tying goal.

The Rangers will continue on with their title pursuit, facing the Pittsburgh Penguins in the second round starting Friday.

What went wrong

1 Falling behind
The Flyers got off to a smashing start in Game 6 and it appeared their momentum would continue in Game 7 with a pretty solid first period. But the Rangers stole the momentum with two goals in the second period, taking total control and forcing the Flyers to play catchup — again.

2 Rangers forecheck
The Flyers had no answer for New York's forecheck, especially in the decisive second period. It's hard to create offense for yourself when you are spending so much time in front of your own net. The Rangers created second and third chances offensively, and it led to Philly's downfall.

3 Another block party
The Flyers were outshot 33-27, but it was a repeat of their Game 3 loss (when the Rangers blocked 29 shots). In this one, the Flyers were turned away on 22 shots by Rangers defenders, including Ryan McDonagh with four and Dan Girardi with five. EVAN MACY

Unhappy Hamels

Hamels rattled by rain

Cole Hamels had to battle both the Mets and the elements on a cold, rainy 6-1 loss Tuesday night, and after 4 2/3 innings and 51 balls (of 106 pitched), Hamels said he was "embarrassed" by his performance. "[I just wasn't] able to locate pitches or throw strikes or even apply a plan of attack to hitters," Hamels said. "When you're not able to execute it creates a serious issue. It led to a very poor performance. I'm truly embarrassed."

Phillies could use Big 3 against Nats

Mother Nature must really want the Phillies to rest.

The Phillies had an off day prior to their rainy 6-1 loss to the New York Mets Mets Tuesday, and thanks to continued downpours Wednesday they had that game cancelled. A scheduled off day follows Thursday before the Phillies host the Washington Nationals for three games — after three of four days off.

The Phillies should be able to, if manager Ryne Sandberg chooses, throw Cliff Lee, A.J. Burnett and Cole Hamels in the three-game set, respectively. METRO

5 Defensive backs

Despite taking some big strides in the right direction last season, the Eagles' defense still ranked 29th in the NFL in yards allowed (or, if you're feeling optimistic, 17th in points allowed).

Recent secondaries have seen the fans longing for the days of Brian Dawkins, Troy Vincent and Bobby Taylor.

Cary Williams / GETTY IMAGES

The two big names at safety, Alabama's Ha Ha Clinton-Dix and Louisville's Calvin Pryor are long shots for the Birds — but in the unlikely case either is still on the board, the Eagles could take one of them at No. 22 overall.

Here are some safeties and cornerbacks that the Eagles are more than likely to see available in the late first round and beyond.

LUKE MILLER
@MetroPhilly

Darqueze Dennard, Michigan State

Dennard / GETTY IMAGES

Michigan State's Darqueze Dennard is as accomplished a cornerback as you'll find.

He won the Jim Thorpe Award as the nation's top defensive back and was a unanimous first-team All-America.

Dennard has good size for a corner at 5-foot-11, but should grow into a more physical player to complement his cover skills. A three-year starter, he finished with 10 career interceptions. If the Eagles want Dennard, they may need to move up in the first round to get him.

Eagles should draft

Deone Bucannon, Washington State

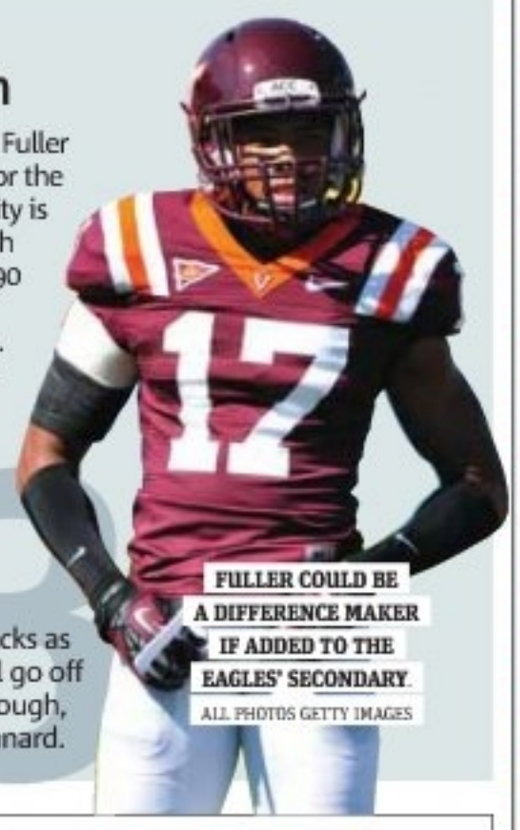
Bucannon / GETTY IMAGES

Washington State's Deone Bucannon has been an incredibly productive safety. The three-time captain finished his college career with 384 tackles and 15 interceptions while also contributing on special teams.

Besides his good size for the position (6-foot-1, 211 pounds), Bucannon also has the Pac-12-Chip Kelly connection.

Bucannon is potentially the best safety available when the Birds will be picking, though perhaps not worthy of a first-round choice.

Kyle Fuller, Virginia Tech



FULLER COULD BE A DIFFERENCE MAKER IF ADDED TO THE EAGLES' SECONDARY.
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Virginia Tech's Kyle Fuller started 42 games for the Hokies. His durability is complemented with his size (6-foot-1, 190 pounds) and his 38 1/2-inch vertical.

A team captain who also starred on special teams, Fuller showed a willingness to play physically, highlighted by 14 1/2 tackles for losses and 4 1/2 sacks as a sophomore. He'll go off the board early, though, probably after Dennard.

Brock Vereen, Minnesota

BROCK VEREEN'S BROTHER, SHANE, IS A RUNNING BACK FOR THE PATRIOTS.

Minnesota's Brock Vereen spent time at cornerback and safety in college. Despite being strong in coverage, Vereen is not a ball hawk — he had only four career interceptions. He had a great combine, leading all defensive backs with 25 bench-press reps.

He is the brother of Shane Vereen, the running back for the Patriots. Vereen could be a great middle-round option for the Eagles if they choose to go in another direction early.

Keith McGill, Utah

Utah's Keith McGill is an intriguing possibility. A monster at corner (6-foot-3, 211 pounds) with a 39-inch vertical, he could find himself transitioning to safety, where he played early in his college career.

McGill is something of a project despite being 25-years-old. He played junior-college football before missing the entire 2012 season with a shoulder injury. He rebounded to start every game at cornerback in 2013.

The majority of these injuries were sprains and strains due to overexertion such as lifting objects or patients. Be sure to follow all your employers procedures to prevent an injury on the job. If your employer does not provide policies or training on these procedures you should contact OSHA for help protecting your rights to a safe workplace.
